- what do we mean by a continuum of SEN provision;

Librarian STILL needed urgently!

Jenny, one of our fantastic volunteers, has recently been helping do the library. However she has just had a major operation and can no longer do so. If no one comes forward to help, we will not be able to have the library at our meetings for the foreseeable future. If you are interested please contact Jo a.s.a.p.

Residential Success

AWARE's first residential weekend at Lineham Farm, Eccup, Leeds was a resounding success! The feedback from parents and the children who took part has been extremely positive: "The organization was excellent. We know a lot of thought and effort went into ensuring things ran smoothly." The children all enjoyed the space and wide range of activities (including climbing, cycling and animal care) available to them and the trained 1:1 support meant they were always safe and supported appropriately when needed. We hope this will be the first of many!

Easter play scheme

Due to Jo's other commitments, and centre availability, there will only be two play scheme days at Easter: Wed 4th & Thurs 5th April. All supported places now fully booked. If you would like to attend with your children, just turn up: £2/ family/day + £1 per friend.

Parent and Pre-school group

Cancelled until a core group is identified plus a suitable day and time can be established; please contact Jo if interested.

Thanks to the Cow and Calf

The AWARE committee would like to thank the Cow and Calf Hotel, Ilkley for their continuing support, allowing us to use their meeting room free of charge – this is very much appreciated.

Every Disabled Child Matters Update

From: Louise Franklin, Campaign and Policy Officer, Every Disabled Child Matters

“We are extremely disappointed to report that the Disabled Children (Family Support) Bill has not progressed to the next stage. This is despite the efforts of all our supporters who lobbied their MP to support the Bill. You will be able to see if your MP spoke at the debate by logging on to the Hansard website <http://www.parliament.uk>

We are pleased that the government made some important commitments in response to the debate on the Bill, including a national target on disabled children. The Minister said 'much more can be and must be done'. He confirmed that the Bill had greatly raised the profile of short break services and had made disabled children more of a priority within government.

Gary Streeter MP (Cons, Devon SW), who sponsored the Bill, and the campaign board of Every Disabled Child Matters, have asked me to thank every single supporter who took the time to take action in support of the Bill. Through your efforts, disabled children and the issue of short breaks are now higher on the political agenda than they have ever been before.

Gary Streeter MP said: 'The provision of short breaks is still a lottery. Extra cash and new guidance will be welcome, but I strongly believe that these families need and deserve a right to breaks. What we must see now is a clear plan of government action - nothing less will do. If we don't see real improvements in services offered to families, I'm certain that I or one of my colleagues will be introducing another Bill this time next year.'

Our job now is to keep up the pressure on government to deliver the best possible outcome from the Comprehensive Spending Review. We will be back in touch soon with further ways that you can help us make this happen.

BADASG Autism Awareness Conference taken from the BADASG Newsletter:

“BADASG would like to say a big thank you to everyone who attended our Autism Awareness conference on 21st March and to all those who helped to make it happen. It was a great day, despite the unfortunate illness of Roz Blackburn's carer, which meant that Roz sadly couldn't attend as a speaker. The day was not cut short, however, because Dr Olga Bogdashina kindly filled the gap with a second talk. The speakers all did a fantastic job on the day and the feedback from the conference has been very positive.

Professor Michael Gardner gave an interesting and informative talk surrounding gluten and casein in the diet and how this seems to have an effect on various different aspects of behaviour for some groups of people on the autistic spectrum. He was followed by Dr John Biddulph and Fiona Biddulph who gave a presentation in the form of a timeline, contrasting their very different childhoods and following them into their adulthoods and their relationship together, and finally Dr Olga Bogdashina spoke about the way in which people on the autistic spectrum, parents, and professionals, view autism from their different perspectives, then about the sensory issues people on the autistic spectrum face. The day was very well attended, and we had to bring more chairs into the hall to accommodate everyone who came! I know there were quite a few people who didn't manage to get a place and the demand for this kind of event is very high. It was unfortunate that we didn't have enough places for everyone who wanted to attend the day, but the demand is encouraging in that more and more people seem to want to learn about the autistic spectrum and become aware of the issues surrounding autism, and we hope to arrange another next year to meet this demand."
